Dear Sir:-

Because of an unusual sighting and having seen your name mentioned in our local newspaper, I would like to report the following incident:-

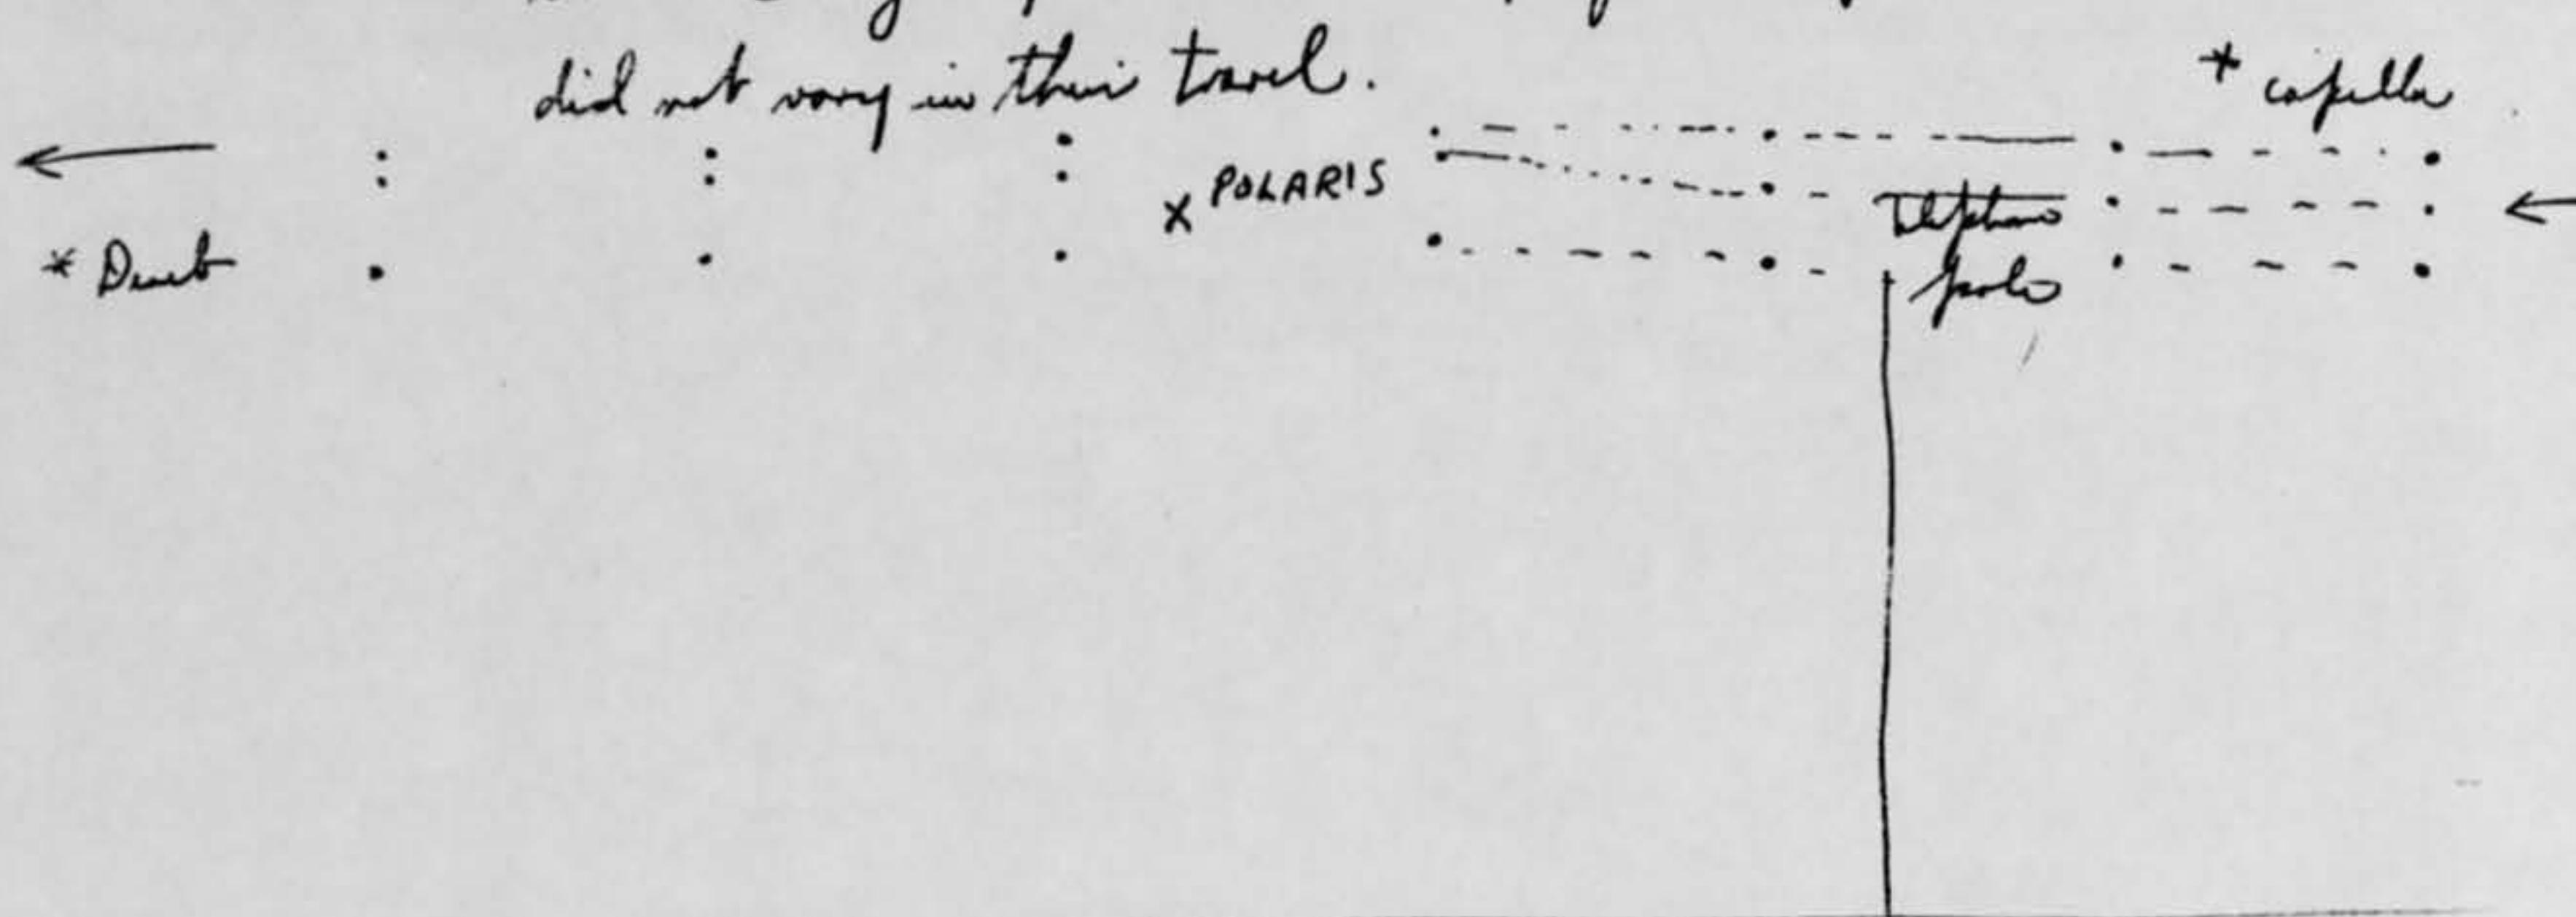

On the evening of 14 Nov 64 @ approx. 21:40 hrs. while studying the constellations with 2-10 yr. old girls, their aunt and a Dr. Rudy Martin at the rear of a residence (73rd St. and Bushnell - Milw.) - three, reddish-brown objects, in a straight line in a N-S axis, appeared in the eastern sky in the area between Arcturus and the Hyades - rapidly traveled westward, passing near the north star. When first seen, they were evenly spaced, estimated at 3-5° apart. The two girls became excited and exclaimed "look at that" as the objects neared Polaris. At about this time, the two objects closest to Polaris tended to converge and then again formed a parallel path, but remained closer together than when originally seen.

The trio disappeared in the West in the locality of of lights. The estimated time of travel from east to west was approx. 5-6 seconds. These did not appear to be any sound, they were reddish-brown, estimated magnitude 2-3 and appeared to have size, (no stellar configuration) There may have been a faint² luminosity following near the objects but this did not appear to linger or last in any way in the manner of meteor trails which I have observed before.

The rapidity of travel, grouping of three, convergence of two and then paralleling course, no brightening luminosity of path, made this a most unusual sighting. The luminosity of the objects did not vary in their travel.

I hope others saw this interesting sighting - most unusual!

Cordially yours,

Dear Major:

Here are reports on two sightings I recently investigated. One is the old case of 14 November 1964, made by Dr. [REDACTED] and two young ladies in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. This remains an unknown. The facts as stated in his letter of 16 November are completely unchanged. There is always a possibility that these were birds, but we can't find any source of reflected light.

A few points can be added: after all this time, Dr. [REDACTED] regards this as having been "a most unusual sight". I had him count off an imaginary re-enactment of the incident and it came more or less in ten (10) seconds. During this time the three objects travelled some 160 degrees. Courses were strictly parallel except that one light moved abruptly closer to the one above it midway, and then continued on a strictly parallel path.

Dr. [REDACTED] said it was not a brilliant light, was reddish, "had some size" and did not have the pinpoint scintillation of stars. "If you had not been looking, you would have missed it." The Dr. Martin who was with him never did locate objects. Lights seemed to be emanating from objects, and trailing edge seemed to have a little additional luminosity. He said they were like three dim night lights whizzing across the sky. Both the ten-year-old girls saw them also.

I had talked with the girls earlier ([REDACTED] and [REDACTED]). One girl said, "like a sandwich plate but smaller than the moon". The other girl said it looked like round balls, "like tennis balls reflecting light, that got smaller and smaller but stayed the same brightness". Observations were made from an alley in back of the house. No lights, other than occasional street lights, no shopping center nearby. The moon was shining.

Dr. [REDACTED] definitely thinks they were not birds, but there is still no completely compelling reason to rule this out. There was no sound whatever. It seems to me that birds fifty (50) to one hundred (100) feet above observers could have caused this. Certainly, air craft are ruled out because of high speed.

That's all on this report.
